Report Highlights Problematic Katrina Contracting Practices

February 28, 2006

The final report of The House Select Bipartisan Committee to Investigate the Preparation for and Response to Hurricane Katrina (<http://katrina.house.gov/>) criticizes all levels of government for using problematic contracting practices, such as orally changing the scope of work in the middle of an engagement and awarding most contracts on a sole-source basis or pursuant to limited competition. Among other proposed reforms, the Committee recommends that the Government enter into contracts in advance of each hurricane season to avoid the chaos and potential for fraud and abuse associated with contracting under intense pressure.
