

Reid Tomasello Elected Co-Chair of Young Tax Lawyers Committee of the Federal Bar Association's Section on Taxation

Washington, D.C. – October 13, 2022: Reid Tomasello, an associate in Crowell & Moring's Tax Group in Washington, D.C., has been elected co-chair of the Young Tax Lawyers Committee of the Federal Bar Association's Section on Taxation.

Tomasello's practice concentrates primarily on federal tax controversy and litigation. He represents clients involved in controversy with the IRS during the examination and appeals process and in litigation in trial and appellate courts nationwide. In addition, Tomasello advises clients on tax issues associated with transactions involving partnerships and regulated investment companies.

S. Starling Marshall, a partner in Crowell's Tax Group in New York, was elected chair of the section in 2021 and currently serves as immediate past chair.

The FBA's Section on Taxation promotes the welfare, interests, education and professional growth and development of its members; promotes high standards of professional competence and ethical conduct in the practice of federal tax law; provides opportunities for interaction between tax practitioners in public service and the private sector.
