- 9:00 a.m.     Structuring a Reinsurance Program
Peter C. Thomas, Executive Vice President & Managing Director, Willis Re
 The structure of the reinsurance program will be discussed from the perspectives of the reinsurance buyer, broker and underwriter. This interactive presentation will explore the importance of coverage, risk analysis and structure.
- 10:15 a.m.    Refreshment Break - Knickerbocker Foyer - Sponsored by
- 10:30 a.m.    Out of the Backroom: Different Kinds of Reinsurance Contracts and Related Issues
David N. Kragseth, Technical Contracts Team Leader, Underwriting Services Division, Munich RE
 Learn why it is important for the underwriter or broker to work closely with contract wording specialists early in the placement process to avoid certain common drafting issues and to ensure the final contract wording fully and accurately articulates the underwriting intent of the parties. Also learn why this type of working relationship is particularly needed as traditional reinsurance agreements become more complex and non-traditional reinsurance agreements involving capital markets become more common.

Knickerbocker Room C

- Is the Reinsurance Contract the Entire Agreement Even When It Says It Is?

Edward J. Kelley, VP - Deputy General Counsel, Transatlantic Reinsurance Co.

There is tension between integration, or "entire agreement," clauses often included in reinsurance contracts and "disengagement" provisions, which are a common feature of arbitration provisions. Integration clauses generally provide that the contract document itself comprises the entire agreement between the parties. Disengagement provisions, on the other hand, provide arbitration panels with the authority to consider items outside the agreement in rendering their decision. This breakout session will identify the tension between these contract provisions and suggest ways to alleviate that tension.
