1 Multilateral conventions relating to arbitration

Is your country a contracting state to the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards? Since when has the Convention been in force? Were any declarations or notifications made under articles I, X and XI of the Convention? What other multilateral conventions relating to international commercial and investment arbitration is your country a party to?

The New York Convention has been in force in the United Kingdom, of which England and Wales are a part, since 1975. This is, however, subject to the 'reciprocity reservation', meaning recognition and enforcement are limited to awards made in other contracting states. The application of the Convention was subsequently extended to the following overseas territories of the UK: Gibraltar (1975), the Isle of Man (1979), Bermuda (1979), the Cayman Islands (1980), Guernsey (1985), Jersey (2002) and most recently the British Virgin Islands (2014).

The Convention on the Settlement of Investment Disputes between States and Nationals of Other States 1965 (the ICSID Convention) entered into force in the UK in 1967.

The Energy Charter Treaty 1994 has been in force in the UK since 1998.

On 17 March 2015, the UK became a founding signatory to the United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration. The Convention will enter into force after ratification by three signatory states (currently pending).

2 Bilateral investment treaties

Do bilateral investment treaties exist with other countries?

As of December 2015, the UK has entered into 110 bilateral investment treaties (BITs) with other countries, according to the list provided on the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) website. Of these, 95 are currently in force. The treaties entered into by the UK do not extend to any of its various overseas territories unless there is an exchange of notes between the contracting states explicitly extending the reach of a treaty to specific territories.

These treaties typically express an intention to encourage and promote investment from each contracting state into the other, and provide that, if certain investment protections set out in the treaty are breached, the investor can resolve its dispute with the host state by international arbitration. BITs typically provide for arbitration under institutional rules (most commonly ICSID) or for ad hoc arbitration under UNCITRAL rules.

3 Domestic arbitration law

What are the primary domestic sources of law relating to domestic and foreign arbitral proceedings, and recognition and enforcement of awards?

The primary source of domestic arbitration law is the Arbitration Act 1996 (the Act), which governs both domestic and foreign arbitral proceedings. Under section 2, the Act applies where the seat of the arbitration is in England or Wales. With the exception of Part III of the Act, which deals with recognition and enforcement of foreign awards, the Act does not differentiate between domestic and foreign proceedings. While sections 85-87 relate to 'domestic arbitration agreements', these sections are not in force, and are, therefore, without legal effect.

4 Domestic arbitration and UNCITRAL

Is your domestic arbitration law based on the UNCITRAL Model Law? What are the major differences between your domestic arbitration law and the UNCITRAL Model Law?

The Act adopted the principles set out in the UNCITRAL Model Law of 1985, although not the Model Law itself. The Departmental Advisory Committee led by Lord Justice Saville (as he then was) considered it more appropriate to draft a new arbitration law setting out in statutory form and, in a structure similar to that of the Model Law, the existing principles of arbitration law in England.

The Act includes the majority of the key features of the 1985 Model Law, but there are a number of significant differences, including:

- the default provision under the Act provides for a tribunal to be composed of a single arbitrator, while the Model Law contemplates a tribunal of three arbitrators;
- under the Act, the parties are free to opt out of the provision that the arbitration agreement is separable from the substantive agreement in which it appears;
- similarly, the parties are free to opt out of the Act's provision that competence to rule on the jurisdiction of the arbitration tribunal lies with the tribunal itself; and
- the Act permits a party to challenge an arbitration award on a question of English law arising out of the award in narrowly defined circumstances.

The Act has not been amended to take account of the revisions included in the 2006 UNCITRAL Model Law.

5 Mandatory provisions

What are the mandatory domestic arbitration law provisions on procedure from which parties may not deviate?

Schedule 1 of the Act lists the mandatory provisions of Part 1 of the Act. These include:

- the provisions relating to the stay of court proceedings where an arbitration agreement is in place (sections 9-11);
- the power of the court to extend the time limit for commencing arbitration proceedings (or other dispute resolution mechanisms which must be exhausted before recourse to arbitration) beyond that set out in the arbitration agreement (section 12);
- the application of the Limitation Acts (as defined in the Act) to arbitral proceedings (section 13);
- the power of the court to remove an arbitrator under certain circumstances (section 24);
- the effect of the death of an arbitrator (section 26(1));
- the joint and several liability of the parties to pay the arbitrators' reasonable fees and expenses (including the fees of any expert appointed by the tribunal) (sections 28 and 37(2));
- the immunity of arbitrators for acts done or omitted in the discharge or purported discharge of their functions as arbitrators, and an equivalent immunity for arbitral institutions (sections 29 and 74);

- that objections to the substantive jurisdiction of a tribunal should be made before the first step in the proceedings to contest the merits is taken (section 31);
- the court's power to determine questions of a tribunal's substantive jurisdiction (section 32);
- the general duties of the arbitral tribunal to act fairly and impartially, and to adopt procedures suitable to the circumstances of the case (section 33);
- a requirement that the parties do all things necessary for the proper and expeditious conduct of the arbitral proceedings (section 40);
- the availability of court procedures to secure the attendance of witnesses (by agreement of the parties or with the tribunal's permission) (section 43);
- the power of a tribunal to refuse to deliver an award without payment of the arbitrators' fees (section 56);
- a provision that an agreement that the costs of the arbitration are to be borne by one party is only valid if made after the dispute arose (section 60);
- that an arbitral award may be enforced in the same manner as a court judgment or order (with the court's leave) (section 66);
- the provisions relating to challenging an award in the courts because the tribunal lacked substantive jurisdiction, or because there was a serious irregularity affecting the tribunal, the proceedings or the award (sections 67 and 68 (and sections 70 and 71, insofar as they relate to sections 67 and 68));
- the rights of a person alleged to be a party to arbitral proceedings but who takes no part in them (section 72);
- that a party who fails to make a timely objection to the jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal on the manner in which the proceedings have been conducted cannot raise that objection later, unless that party can demonstrate that it did not know, and could not with reasonable diligence have known, of the grounds for objection at the time (section 73); and
- that a power to charge property recovered in relation to arbitral proceedings with the payment of solicitors' costs exists for arbitral proceedings (section 75).

6 Substantive law

Is there any rule in your domestic arbitration law that provides the arbitral tribunal with guidance as to which substantive law to apply to the merits of the dispute?

Section 46 of the Act states that a tribunal shall determine the dispute in accordance with the substantive law chosen by the parties.

Alternatively, the parties may agree that the tribunal can decide the dispute in accordance with such other considerations as the parties or the tribunal itself may determine. Such considerations may include trade uses, lex mercatoria, amiable composition and ex aequo et bono decisions.

Where no such agreement is discernible, section 46 provides that a tribunal shall apply the conflict of laws rules 'which it considers applicable'.

7 Arbitral institutions

What are the most prominent arbitral institutions situated in your country?

The most prominent institution based in England that deals with international commercial arbitration is the London Court of International Arbitration (LCIA).

The LCIA traces its origins back to 1883. Based in London, the LCIA's caseload is primarily international. More than 300 new cases are referred to the LCIA each year, with only around 17 per cent of the parties being English.

The LCIA has also established arbitration centres in India and Mauritius, and is closely involved in the UAE through the DIFC-LCIA Arbitration Centre.

Under the LCIA's International Arbitration Rules, the parties are free to choose the seat of the arbitration, but if they have failed to express a choice, the LCIA Rules default to arbitration in England. The parties are also free to nominate any arbitrators, subject to their confirmation by the LCIA Court. The secretariat administers cases submitted to the LCIA, with the LCIA Court overseeing the proper application of the LCIA Rules. The court has 35 members, all very prominent and well-respected international arbitration experts, only five of whom are English.

The LCIA adopted new arbitration rules with effect from 1 October 2014 (the 2014 LCIA Rules). These rules include a number of new features, including:

- LCIA arbitration tribunals are explicitly empowered to impose costs sanctions on parties who engage in 'non-cooperation resulting in undue delay';
- party representatives are deemed to have agreed to abide by principles of ethical conduct set out in the Annex to the 2014 LCIA Rules; and
- new rules were adopted for the appointment of emergency arbitrators.

LCIA fees are assessed on the basis of specified hourly rates, as opposed to being a percentage of the value of the dispute.

The Chartered Institute of Arbitrators (CI Arb) also offers international arbitration services including its own rules and acting as an appointing authority. However, it is principally renowned in the international arbitration community for its key role in the training and accreditation of arbitrators.

In addition, many arbitrations seated in London are conducted under the international arbitration rules of institutions based elsewhere, including the International Court of Arbitration of the International Chamber of Commerce and the International Centre for Dispute Resolution, a division of the American Arbitration Association.

Arbitration agreement

8 Arbitrability

Are there any types of disputes that are not arbitrable?

The Act does not exclude any specific categories from arbitration and, in general, English courts take an inclusive view of what is arbitrable. Section 1(b) of the Act provides that parties should be free to decide how their disputes will be resolved, limited only by safeguards necessary in the public interest. Section 6(1) of the Act provides that both contractual and non-contractual disputes are arbitrable, but does not go further. Criminal and certain family law matters are not considered arbitrable (although the High Court has made a consent order in the terms of an arbitral award made by the Beth Din in matrimonial proceedings (AI v MT [2013] EWHC 100 (Fam))). As a matter of practicality, where a state grant of a right or protection is concerned (such as a patent) the dispute will not be able to be fully resolved by recourse to an arbitral tribunal. Similarly, where a debt arises in an agreement subject to arbitration, a winding-up petition may be more appropriate than arbitration where the dispute concerns whether the debtor is capable of settling the debt (Salford Estates (No. 2) Limited v Altomart Limited [2014] EWCA 575 Civ). Consumer disputes for sums under £5,000 are not arbitrable (Unfair Arbitration Agreements (Specified Amount) Order 1999 (SI 2167/99)).

9 Requirements

What formal and other requirements exist for an arbitration agreement?

An arbitration agreement is an agreement to submit to arbitration present or future disputes, whether contractual or not (section 6).

Oral arbitration agreements are possible at common law, but they do not receive the statutory protections of the Act. The Act applies only to arbitration agreements in writing (section 5), save for a few exceptions set out below. Agreements in writing are defined very broadly, including:

- agreements made in writing, whether or not signed by the parties (section 5(2)(a));
- an exchange of communications in writing, or an agreement evidenced in writing (section 5(2)(b) and (c)); and
- an agreement otherwise than in writing by reference to terms which are in writing (section 5(3)).

This definition therefore includes general terms and conditions. Where one party to arbitration proceedings alleges the existence of an agreement to arbitrate, if the other party fails to deny the allegation, this also creates an arbitration agreement under the Act (section 5(5)).

The requirement for writing is excluded in some scenarios:

- termination of arbitration agreements (section 23(4));
- consumer arbitration agreements are governed by the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations, which is recognised at sections 89 to 91 of the Act;

- small claims arbitration in the county court (section 92);
- arbitrations involving a judge as arbitrator (section 93); and
- statutory arbitrations (sections 94 to 97).

It has been held that where parties have agreed to arbitrate disputes under one agreement, this agreement may become an implied term of subsequent agreements, such as settlement agreements (Interserve Industrial Services Ltd v ZRE Katowice SA [2012] EWHC 3205 (TCC)).

In Transgrain Shipping BV v Deulemar Shipping SpA (In Liquidation) [2014] EWHC 4202 (Comm), the Court considered two inconsistent sets of arbitration provisions in a sub-charter, one of which provided for a tribunal of two arbitrators and an umpire, while the other provided for three arbitrators. The Court preferred the clause that best gave effect to the parties' objective intentions.

10 Enforceability

In what circumstances is an arbitration agreement no longer enforceable?

English courts approach issues of the enforceability of an arbitration agreement from a pro-arbitration perspective. Section 7 of the Act embodies the principle of separability, unless the parties agree otherwise. Consequently, even if the underlying agreement is unenforceable, the arbitration agreement will be enforceable, unless there are circumstances that impeach the arbitration agreement itself (Fiona Trust & Holding Corporation v Yuri Privalov [2007] EWCA Civ 20). An agreement providing that the parties would 'endeavour to first resolve the matter through Swiss arbitration', but failing such resolution would submit the dispute to the courts of England was interpreted by the English Court to constitute a mere agreement to attempt to agree an arbitration process rather than being a binding agreement to arbitrate (Kruppa v Benedetti [2014] EWHC 1887 (Comm)).

Under section 8 of the Act, an arbitration agreement is not discharged by the death of a party, and it may therefore be enforced against that party's personal representative.

One of the parties may inadvertently waive the right to arbitrate a dispute in circumstances where it takes a step in court proceedings which are inconsistent with the agreement to submit disputes to arbitration. See, by way of example, Nokia Corp v HTC Corp [2012] EWHC 3199 (Pat).

11 Third parties – bound by arbitration agreement

In which instances can third parties or non-signatories be bound by an arbitration agreement?

Under English law, on assignment of contractual rights, an assignee is usually bound by an arbitration agreement in the contract as an 'inseparable component of the transferred rights' (West Tankers Inc v RAS Riunione Adriatica di Sicurtà SpA [2005] EWHC 454 (Comm)). Where an arbitration is already under way, the assignee must first give notice to the other parties and the arbitrators. The arbitration may then continue, and orders or awards already made are 'reinstated' as between the other parties, the tribunal and the assignee (Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Inc [2006] EWHC 448 (Comm)). Notice may postdate the assignment itself (Eurosteel Ltd v Sinnes AG [2001] 1 All ER (Comm) 964), although delay in giving notice beyond a reasonable time may lead an English court to conclude that the arbitration has lapsed (NBP Development Ltd & ors v Buildko and Sons Ltd [1992] 8 Const LJ 377).

Where the lex fori or lex arbitri is English law by virtue of the arbitration agreement, the court will likely apply English law to determine the effect of an assignment of an agreement to arbitrate even where the governing law of the contract is otherwise foreign. See, for example, Navigation Maritime Bulgare v Rustal Trading Ltd (The Ivan Zagubanski) [2000] EWHC 222 (Comm); and West Tankers Inc v RAS Riunione Adriatica di Sicurtà SpA [2005] EWHC 454 (Comm).

The civil law concept of universal succession (whereby a company can cease to exist without liquidation, its rights and liabilities transferring wholesale to another company) does not exist in English law. If a foreign company is subject to such a process in another jurisdiction, English law views the succession as analogous to an assignment, which would bind the successor to any arbitration agreements of the prior entity. However, notice is required to continue an arbitration in progress at the time of succession (Republic of Kazakhstan v Istil Group Inc [2006] EWHC 448 (Comm)).

The administrator of an insolvent company is bound by arbitration agreements entered into by that company, because the administrator acts as an agent of the company under paragraph 69, schedule B1 of the Insolvency Act 1986. A liquidator of a company may bring or defend legal proceedings in the name and on behalf of the company being wound up, and so would be bound by an arbitration agreement contained in a contract entered into by the company, pursuant to paragraph 4, schedule 4 Insolvency Act 1986.

The Third Parties (Rights Against Insurers) Act 1930 provides that a third party with a debt claim against an insolvent debtor has a direct claim against an insurer of that debtor. However, in pursuing such a claim, the claimant is bound by any arbitration agreement between the insured and insurer (Socony Mobil Oil v West of England Shipowners Mutual Insurance Association (London) Ltd (The Padre Island) (No. 2) [1991] 2 AC 1). It is not clear whether such a third party with a debt claim may replace the insured in an existing arbitration, although it is likely by analogy with assignment (see Baytur SA v Finagro Holdings SA [1992] QB 610).

Where an insurer may enforce an insured's rights against a third party through subrogation, the insurer is generally bound by any arbitration agreement governing those rights; and if subrogation occurs when arbitration is already under way, the insurer must give notice to the parties and arbitrators (Starlight Shipping Co & anr v Tai Ping Insurance Co Ltd [2007] EWHC 1893 (Comm)).

Unless this is expressly excluded in the parties' contract, a specific statutory right under the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 (the CRTPA Act) allows a third party to enforce terms of contracts that purport to confer a benefit on that third party. A third party exercising such a right is bound by any agreement to arbitrate (section 8(1) CRTPA Act; Nisshin Shipping Co Ltd v Cleaves & Co Ltd [2003] EWHC 2602 (Comm)). In Fortress Value Recovery Fund LLP & ors v Blue Sky Special Opportunities Fund LP (A Firm) [2013] EWCA Civ 367, the Court of Appeal concluded that clear language was required to make the right of a third party to avail itself of an exclusion clause in a contract subject to an arbitration clause in the same agreement.

12 Third parties – participation

Does your domestic arbitration law make any provisions with respect to third-party participation in arbitration, such as joinder or third-party notice?

The primary feature of arbitration is party consent, from which it follows that a tribunal may not add or substitute a party to any proceedings without the acquiescence of the existing parties. For the same reason, under section 35 of the Act, a tribunal may not consolidate its arbitration with another unless the parties consent, even if the separate proceedings relate to similar or the same subject matter.

13 Groups of companies

Do courts and arbitral tribunals in your jurisdiction extend an arbitration agreement to non-signatory parent or subsidiary companies of a signatory company, provided that the non-signatory was somehow involved in the conclusion, performance or termination of the contract in dispute, under the 'group of companies' doctrine?

The group of companies doctrine does not exist in English law (see Peterson Farms Inc v C & M Farming Ltd [2004] EWHC 121 (Comm)).

14 Multiparty arbitration agreements

What are the requirements for a valid multiparty arbitration agreement?

Multiparty arbitration agreements are often adopted in contracts governed by English law and applied in arbitrations seated in England. However, the Act itself does not deal with multiparty arbitration agreements directly, or impose any requirements for such agreements to be valid. Under sections 16(7) and 18 of the Act, if any appointment mechanism contained in a multiparty arbitration agreement should fail, any party may apply to the court for assistance with the appointment of the tribunal.

Constitution of arbitral tribunal

15 Eligibility of arbitrators

Are there any restrictions as to who may act as an arbitrator? Would any contractually stipulated requirement for arbitrators based on nationality, religion or gender be recognised by the courts in your jurisdiction?

Under section 93(2) of the Act judges of the Commercial Court of England and Wales are precluded from sitting as arbitrators without approval of the Lord Chief Justice.

As to specific restrictions of qualification by the parties: the applicability of discrimination laws in the selection of arbitrators within Europe has now been referred to the European Commission, with a request that the issue be addressed by the European Court of Justice. In 2011, the Supreme Court confirmed in Jivraj v Hashwani [2011] UKSC 40, that arbitrators are not employees of the parties, and that a requirement that an arbitrator should be of a particular religion did not contravene the anti-discrimination provisions of the Employment Equality (Religion or Belief) Regulations 2002. The Supreme Court ruled that nationality and religion may validly be taken into account in the selection of arbitrators.

16 Default appointment of arbitrators

Failing prior agreement of the parties, what is the default mechanism for the appointment of arbitrators?

Unless otherwise agreed, either in the arbitration agreement itself, or by the selection of rules of arbitration, section 15(3) of the Act provides that the tribunal shall be comprised of a sole arbitrator.

Section 16 deals with the mechanics of the appointment process, giving the parties 28 days to agree on the appointment of a sole arbitrator, or in the case of a three-member tribunal, 14 days for each party to nominate an arbitrator, the two arbitrators so nominated forthwith selecting the third, who acts as chair of the tribunal. If one party refuses to participate in the appointment process, section 17 permits the other party to declare that its selected arbitrator will act as the sole arbitrator. The defaulting party may then apply to the court under section 18 to set aside the appointment.

Article 5.8 of the 2014 LCIA Rules also provides for the appointment of a sole arbitrator unless the parties have otherwise agreed, and unless the LCIA Court determines that a three-member tribunal would be appropriate in the circumstances. The LCIA Court alone is empowered to appoint arbitrators, taking into account any written agreement between the parties (article 5.7). If the parties have agreed that each of them shall nominate one arbitrator to a three-member tribunal, they must make their nominations in the request for arbitration (article 1.1(v)) and the response (article 2.1(v)). However, the parties' nominees will not be appointed unless they certify that there are no circumstances currently known to the candidate which are likely to give rise to any justifiable doubts as to his or her impartiality or independence, and that the candidate is ready, willing and able to devote sufficient time, diligence and industry to ensure the expeditious and efficient conduct of the arbitration (article 5.4).

Unless otherwise agreed, any party may apply to the court under section 18 of the Act to give directions as to the making of any necessary appointments; to direct that the tribunal shall be constituted by any appointments that have already been made; to revoke any appointments already made; or to make any necessary appointments itself. A useful example of the way the court handles such applications is Man Enterprise Sal v Al-Waddan Hotel Ltd [2013] EWHC 2356 (TCC), in which the court confirmed that, to have jurisdiction to make an order under section 18, there must be a good arguable case that there is a valid arbitration agreement.

17 Challenge and replacement of arbitrators

On what grounds and how can an arbitrator be challenged and replaced? Please discuss in particular the grounds for challenge and replacement, and the procedure, including challenge in court. Is there a tendency to apply or seek guidance from the IBA Guidelines on Conflicts of Interest in International Arbitration?

Under section 24 of the Act, a party to an arbitration may apply to the court for the removal of an arbitrator on the following grounds:

- the existence of circumstances raising 'justifiable doubts' as to the arbitrator's impartiality;

- the arbitrator does not possess the qualifications required by the arbitration agreement;
- the arbitrator is physically or mentally incapable of conducting the proceedings, or there are justifiable doubts as to his or her capacity to do so; or
- the arbitrator has failed to conduct the proceedings properly or efficiently.

In all cases, the applicant must also be able to demonstrate a 'substantial injustice has been or will be caused' by the appointment.

The arbitrator has a right under section 24 to be heard by the court. If the court decides to exercise its power of removal, it may make an order determining the fees the arbitrator should be paid, or require the arbitrator to repay fees or expenses already received.

The relevant test for section 24(1)(a), impartiality of the arbitrator, is 'whether the fair-minded and informed observer, having considered the facts, would conclude that there was a real possibility that the tribunal was biased'. This test, formulated by the House of Lords in Porter v Magill [2001] UKHL 67, is objective. The Court of Appeal confirmed that this test is applicable to arbitrators as well as judges in AT&T Corporation v Saudi Cable Co [2000] EWCA Civ 154.

English courts have also considered the IBA Guidelines. In A v B [2011] EWHC 2345 (Comm) the court concluded that the IBA Guidelines are not intended to override national law, and that 'it necessarily follows that if, applying the common law test, there is no apparent or unconscious bias, the Guidelines cannot alter that conclusion.'

18 Relationship between parties and arbitrators

What is the relationship between parties and arbitrators? Please elaborate on the contractual relationship between parties and arbitrators, neutrality of party-appointed arbitrators, remuneration, and expenses of arbitrators.

The relationship between the parties and the arbitrators is contractual in nature. However, despite this, and regardless of which party appointed them, all arbitrators share an overriding obligation under section 33 of the Act to act 'fairly and impartially between the parties, giving each party a reasonable opportunity of putting his case'.

English law does not determine an arbitrator's level of remuneration or expenses. However, under section 28 of the Act, the parties are 'jointly and severally liable' to pay 'such reasonable fees and expenses (if any) as are appropriate' and it is, therefore, open to the court to review an arbitrator's remuneration. Under section 56(1), a tribunal sitting in England may refuse to deliver an award except upon full payment of the arbitrators' fees and expenses.

19 Immunity of arbitrators from liability

To what extent are arbitrators immune from liability for their conduct in the course of the arbitration?

Under section 29 of the Act, unless acting in bad faith, arbitrators have immunity for acts and omissions in the purported discharge of their duties.

Jurisdiction and competence of arbitral tribunal

20 Court proceedings contrary to arbitration agreements

What is the procedure for disputes over jurisdiction if court proceedings are initiated despite an existing arbitration agreement, and what time limits exist for jurisdictional objections?

Section 9 of the Act provides that when a claim (or counterclaim) is commenced in the courts against a party to an arbitration agreement, that party can apply to stay those court proceedings (see, by way of example, Hashwani v OMV Maurice Energy Ltd [2015] EWHC 1811 (Comm)). Such an application is to be made at the usual point in the proceedings for challenging the court's jurisdiction, namely after the proceedings have been acknowledged by the defending party (there is a place on the form acknowledging service of the proceedings to indicate whether or not jurisdiction will be contested), but before any substantive step in the proceedings is taken by that party. It has been held that an action impliedly affirming the court proceedings is such a step (for example, agreeing to a consent order after a case management conference was found to be an unequivocal step affirming proceedings in Nokia Corp v HTC Corp [2012] EWHC 3199 (Pat)).

In most cases, the acknowledgement of service form is to be submitted within 14 days following service of the claim, so the served party must react promptly.

Section 9(4) makes the granting of a stay by the court mandatory unless the court is satisfied that the arbitration agreement is null and void, inoperative, or incapable of being performed. An incapability of performance does not include a party's impecuniosity. A previously granted stay may be lifted on the grounds the arbitration agreement is inoperative where both parties signal to the court that they have abandoned the arbitral proceedings (for both points, see Trunk Flooring Ltd v HSBC Asset Finance (UK) Ltd & Anr [2015] NIQB 23). The issue can come close to a question of arbitrability (see, for example, the discussion of Salford Estates (No. 2) Limited v Altomart Limited [2014] EWCA 575 Civ in question 8). Parties should be aware that their acceptance of joinder in litigation proceedings may debar them from later raising section 9 to seek a stay of a related counterclaim which may otherwise have been subject to arbitration (see, for example, Unwired Planet International Ltd v Huawei Technologies Co Ltd and Ors [2015] EWHC 2097).

The court also has an inherent jurisdiction to grant a stay of litigation in favour of arbitration even where the litigation involves different parties, if the court is persuaded that there are significant overlapping issues and potential for duplication of costs, although exercise of this power is rare (Stemcor UK Ltd v Global Steel Holdings Ltd and Anr [2015] EWHC 363 (Comm); In the matter of Fenox (UK) Limited sub nom J & W Sanderson Limited v Fenox (UK) Limited & Ors [2014] EWHC 4322 (Ch)).

What is the procedure for disputes over jurisdiction of the arbitral tribunal once arbitral proceedings have been initiated and what time limits exist for jurisdictional objections?

Section 30 of the Act provides that the arbitral tribunal may rule on whether there is a valid arbitration agreement, whether the tribunal is properly constituted, and what matters have been submitted to arbitration. The court also has the power to make an injunction to restrain the pursuit of arbitral proceedings (or even their commencement) under section 37 of the Senior Courts Act 1981, although it will often defer to the tribunal's own power to decide its jurisdiction under section 30 of the Act, or when the arbitral proceedings at issue are in a foreign jurisdiction (see, by way of example, AmTrust Europe Ltd v Trust Risk Group SpA [2015] EWHC 1927 (Comm)).

Section 31 provides that a challenge to the tribunal's jurisdiction in the arbitral proceedings must be raised no later than the time when the challenging party takes its first step in the proceedings to contest the merits of the matter over which it alleges the tribunal has no jurisdiction. Appointing an arbitrator will not prevent a party from contesting the tribunal's jurisdiction. Where a party considers that a tribunal is exceeding its jurisdiction once proceedings are under way, any objection must be made as soon as possible.

Under section 32 of the Act, an application can be made to the court to determine a preliminary point of jurisdiction only if all parties consent in writing to the application being made, or the arbitral tribunal gives permission to make the application and the application is made promptly, determination of the question is likely to produce substantial cost savings, and there is a good reason why the court should decide the matter.

A party to the arbitration can challenge any award issued by the arbitral tribunal for lack of jurisdiction (section 67), provided that the challenging party has no available right of review or appeal under the arbitral process and makes the challenge within 28 days of the date of the award (or the conclusion of the appeal or review process) (section 70(2) and (3)).

A party that fails to avail itself of an opportunity to challenge jurisdiction within the established time period under the Act is debarred from raising the objection at a later stage, either before the arbitral tribunal or the court, unless it can show it could not with reasonable diligence have discovered the ground for objection at the time (section 73(1)).

Where a tribunal issues a partial award (see question 37) on the matter of its jurisdiction, a party's failure to challenge that award under section 67 within the time frame laid out in section 70 deprives it of the right to raise the challenge at a later time (section 73(2), see, by way of example, Emirates Trading Agency LLC v Sociedade de Fomento Industrial Private Limited [2015] EWHC 1452 (Comm)).

The Act also makes provision for persons alleged to be a party to the arbitral proceedings, but who take no part in them, to question through the courts whether there is a valid arbitration agreement, whether the tribunal is properly constituted, and what matters have been submitted to arbitration, or to challenge an award once made for lack of jurisdiction (section 72, see, by way of example, Hashwani v OMV Maurice Energy Ltd [2015] EWHC 1811 (Comm)).

In circumstances of related disputes deriving from separate contracts providing for litigation and arbitration, parties should exercise caution if electing to raise claims or counterclaims before the different bodies. In Swallowfalls Limited v Monaco Yachting & Technologies S.A.M. and Mr Peter Landers JR [2015] EWHC 2013 (Comm) the defendants had brought counterclaims in arbitration which were dismissed. When the defendants subsequently sought to raise those same claims in the litigation, the court struck them as already adjudicated given the defendants' prior election to raise them in the arbitral proceedings.

Arbitral proceedings

22 Place and language of arbitration

Failing prior agreement of the parties, what is the default mechanism for the place of arbitration and the language of the arbitral proceedings?

Under section 3 of the Act, in the absence of any agreement between the parties, and if so authorised by the parties, the tribunal may select the seat of the arbitration. Failing such agreement, it is for the court to determine the seat, having regard to 'all the relevant circumstances'. Unless agreed by the parties, the tribunal may determine under section 34 of the Act where the proceedings are held.

Section 34 of the Act also deals with the language of the arbitration, which, absent agreement between the parties, is a matter for the tribunal to determine.

23 Commencement of arbitration

How are arbitral proceedings initiated?

If there is no agreement between the parties or choice of arbitration rules setting out how the arbitration is to be initiated, section 14 of the Act provides that arbitration is deemed to have commenced when one party gives notice in writing to the other party or to the appointing authority requiring that person to make an appointment. There are no particular formal requirements, except that this notice must be in writing.

In the case of arbitrations under the 2014 LCIA Rules, article 1.4 provides that arbitration is commenced once a request for arbitration is received by the registrar. The request for arbitration should be accompanied by the relevant filing fee. Under article 1.1(vi), if the required filing fee has not been paid, the arbitration is deemed not to have commenced.

Article 1.1 sets out the elements that must be included in the request for arbitration, being: the names and contact details of all parties and their legal representatives; a copy of the arbitration agreement and the document in which it appears; a brief statement describing the nature and circumstances of the dispute and the claims that are advanced; a statement of matters such as the seat and language of the arbitration and the appointment of the arbitrators on which the parties have agreed or on which the claimant wishes to make a proposal; and any nomination of an arbitrator that is required by the arbitration agreement.

24 Hearing

Is a hearing required and what rules apply?

There is no rule requiring a hearing in English arbitration proceedings; however, it is usual practice to hold one. Under article 19.1 of the 2014 LCIA Rules, any party may insist on a hearing unless the parties have previously agreed in writing to a 'documents-only' arbitration.

25 Evidence

By what rules is the arbitral tribunal bound in establishing the facts of the case? What types of evidence are admitted and how is the taking of evidence conducted?

Section 33 of the Act requires the tribunal to act fairly and impartially, and to adopt procedures suitable to the circumstances of the case. Section 34 gives the tribunal power to decide all procedural and evidential matters, subject to any agreement between the parties, including disclosure, questioning of witnesses, what rules of evidence should apply, and the manner in which the evidence should be presented.

The powers granted to a tribunal sitting in England and Wales therefore give the tribunal very broad discretion to determine all matters relating to evidence. It is unusual for a tribunal to adopt the strict rules of evidence that would apply in court proceedings, but tribunals do commonly use the IBA Rules of the Taking of Evidence in International Commercial Arbitration, either as the rules governing the proceedings or as a guide in the exercise of its discretion.

Disclosure of documents is not uncommon, although its scope is usually more limited than would be the case in English court proceedings.

Any person may appear as a witness, including the parties themselves. Witnesses of fact usually give their direct evidence by way of witness statements, and are cross-examined on their evidence during the hearing. The parties may appoint expert witnesses who submit written reports and appear at the hearing for cross-examination and questioning by the tribunal. The tribunal may also appoint experts under section 37 of the Act, although this power is rarely exercised.

26 Court involvement

In what instances can the arbitral tribunal request assistance from a court and in what instances may courts intervene?

The court may assist an arbitral tribunal in a number of ways. It can enforce a peremptory order if that order is not complied with in the time prescribed (or a reasonable time) and the applicant has exhausted available arbitral procedures for forcing compliance (section 42 of the Act). With the permission of the tribunal or agreement of the other parties, a party to an arbitration may seek the court's assistance to secure the attendance of a witness, or to obtain disclosure of documents or other evidence, just as in court proceedings (section 43). The court may also assist in relation to the following matters under section 44 (unless this is excluded by agreement of the parties):

- taking witness evidence;
- preserving evidence;
- making orders relating to the inspection, detention, sampling, etc of property that is the subject of the proceedings (in Assimina Maritime v Pakistan Shipping Corporation [2004] EWHC 3005 (Comm) the High Court ordered a third party to produce a report for inspection);
- authorising entry to premises in possession or control of a party;
- the sale of goods that are the subject of the proceedings;
- the granting of an interim injunction or appointment of a receiver; and
- orders for the preservation of evidence or assets, in cases of urgency.

The court may also determine a question of law arising in the course of arbitration proceedings, either by the agreement of the parties or with the arbitral tribunal's permission on application by a party to approach the court, if the court is satisfied that determining the question will produce a substantial costs saving and the application was made without delay (section 45). This is rarely sought in practice, but a recent example is found in Secretary of State for Defence v Turner Estate Solutions Ltd [2015] EWHC 1150 (TCC).

27 Confidentiality

Is confidentiality ensured?

The Act makes no particular provision regarding confidentiality, but it is generally recognised that arbitration proceedings are private and members of the public cannot attend hearings as they can proceedings in open court. Some institutional rules include a duty of confidentiality (eg, 2014 LCIA Rules article 30); others do not. Typically, a tribunal will address the issue of confidentiality in its procedural orders. This is important as English law does not clearly define the scope of the confidentiality obligation.

English law typically treats confidentiality as an implied term of the arbitration agreement (see Ali Shipping Corporation v Shipyard Trogir [1997] EWCA Civ 3054, but note that this approach was criticised by the Privy Council as being insufficiently flexible in Associated Electric & Gas Insurance Services Ltd v European Reinsurance Company of Zurich (Bermuda) [2003] UKPC 11).

The duty of confidentiality is subject to a number of recognised exceptions, including the consent or agreement of the parties to dispense with or limit obligations on confidentiality, where disclosure is required or permitted by a court (for example, by order of the court in other proceedings, Science Research Council v Nassé [1980] AC 1028), where disclosure is necessary to establish or protect legal rights (for example, to claim an indemnity for its liability to the other arbitrating party, Hassneh Insurance Co of Israel v Mew [1993] 2 Lloyd's Rep 243; and where a principal wishes to obtain documents put before arbitral proceedings in which it has a financial interest and its agent is a party to the arbitration, AMEC Foster Wheeler Group Limited v Morgan Sindall Professional Services Limited & Ors [2015] EWHC 2012 (TCC)) and where it is in the interests of justice (for example, to prevent an overseas court being misled about the scope of an arbitration, Emmott v Michael Wilson & Partners Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 184). In Westwood Shipping Lines Inc & Anor v Universal Schiffahrtsgesellschaft MBH & Anor [2012] EWHC 3837 (Comm), where an arguable claim could not otherwise be pursued in court, a party was permitted to rely on documents used in an earlier arbitration proceeding because it was considered reasonably necessary to protect the claimant's legitimate interests, and it was in the interests of justice. More recently, the court has indicated that a claimant does not need permission to bring litigation proceedings in the protection of its legitimate interests, although otherwise in violation of arbitral confidentiality, but it acts at its own risk in so doing (Sarah Lynette Webb v Lewis Silkin LLP [2015] EWHC 687 (Ch)).

The rules governing English court procedure (the Civil Procedure Rules (CPR)) provide that court proceedings relating to arbitration are generally heard in private, except for those relating to the determination of a preliminary point of law under section 45 or an appeal on a point of law under section 69 of the Act (CPR 62.10(3)), although the court has a general discretion to make any arbitration claim hearing private (CPR 62.10(1)). However, this is counterbalanced by a public interest in judgments of the court being public, particularly in relation to appeals under section 68 of the Act. See Department of Economic Policy of the City of Moscow v Bankers Trust [2004] EWCA Civ 314.

Interim measures and sanctioning powers

28 Interim measures by the courts

What interim measures may be ordered by courts before and after arbitration proceedings have been initiated?

Section 44(1) of the Act states that the court has the same powers in support of arbitration proceedings as it would in court proceedings to make orders having to do with, for example, the taking and preservation of evidence and the granting of interim injunctions, or the appointment of a receiver. The court's powers under section 44 are not mandatory and may be restricted by agreement between the parties. Furthermore, the court may only exercise its powers under section 44 where, in a case of urgency, it is necessary to preserve evidence or assets, or where the application is made with the permission of the tribunal or the agreement of the other party. In either case, section 44(5) provides that 'the court shall act only if or to the extent that the arbitral tribunal, and any arbitral or other institution or person vested by the parties with power in that regard, has no power or is unable for the time being to act effectively.'

In practice, the powers conferred on the court by section 44 of the Act are used with restraint (see Cetelem SA v Roust Holdings Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 618) and in circumstances where the tribunal is unable to act for one reason or another (section 44(5)). For example, arbitral tribunals lack jurisdiction over third parties, thus some interim measures may only be sought from the court (such as a freezing order over money held by third parties).

The Supreme Court in AES UST-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant LLP v UST-Kamenogorsk Hydropower Plant JSC [2013] UKSC 35 examined the interplay between section 37 of the Senior Courts Act 1981 and section 44 of the Act. The Supreme Court held that, even where no arbitration had been commenced and none was intended, section 37 of the Senior Courts Act 1981 gave the court jurisdiction to grant an anti-suit injunction. This was followed in Southport Success SA v Tsingsham Holding Group Co Ltd [2015] EWHC 1974 (Comm).

29 Interim measures by an emergency arbitrator

Does your domestic arbitration law or do the rules of the domestic arbitration institutions mentioned above provide for an emergency arbitrator prior to the constitution of the arbitral tribunal?

The Act does not provide for emergency arbitrator appointments.

The 2014 LCIA Rules have added a provision for appointment of an emergency arbitrator on application in writing to the LCIA Court stating reasons for the need of emergency relief (article 9B), as well as providing for expedited formation of a tribunal also on application in writing (articles 5 and 9A). The LMAA Terms of Appointment 2012 do not make explicit provision regarding emergency arbitrators, although at clause 8(b)(iv), should a tribunal of three be in the process of formation, but the third arbitrator not yet have been selected, the two presently appointed arbitrators may make decisions, orders and awards upon 'any matter' on which they are agreed.

30 Interim measures by the arbitral tribunal

What interim measures may the arbitral tribunal order after it is constituted? In which instances can security for costs be ordered by an arbitral tribunal?

Under the Act, and to the extent not otherwise agreed by the parties, the tribunal may order:

- security for costs (section 38(3) (though this may not be on the basis that the claimant is resident, or a corporation formed or substantially controlled from, outside the UK) (section 38(3)(a) and (b)));
- the inspection, photographing or preservation of a party's property (section 38(4)(a)); and
- the preservation of evidence (section 38(6)).

In addition, section 39 of the Act allows the parties to agree to empower the tribunal to make any order on a provisional basis granting relief that it would have the power to grant in a final award.

31 Sanctioning powers of the arbitral tribunal

Pursuant to your domestic arbitration law or the rules of the domestic arbitration institutions mentioned above, is the arbitral tribunal competent to order sanctions against parties or their counsel who use 'guerrilla tactics' in arbitration? May counsel be subject to sanctions by the arbitral tribunal or domestic arbitral institutions?

Section 40 of the Act is a mandatory provision imposing a general duty on the parties to arbitration to 'do all things necessary for the proper and expeditious conduct of the arbitral proceedings'. This general duty may be enforced by the tribunal under section 41, with sanctions in some specified circumstances including a dismissal of the claim or defence of the party in breach. If the party fails to comply with a peremptory order of the tribunal, the tribunal or the other party with the permission of the tribunal may apply to the court for an order under section 42. The breach of such an order of the court would be treated as contempt, which could result in fines or a term of imprisonment. The tribunal also has a further opportunity to sanction a recalcitrant party in determining its award of costs under section 61 of the Act.

The 2014 LCIA Rules include an annex entitled General Guidelines for Parties' Legal Representatives, setting out five general principles governing the conduct of party representatives. Article 18.5 empowers an LCIA arbitration tribunal to sanction party representatives for breach of these guidelines by imposing a written reprimand or caution, or adopting other measures (article 18.6). It remains to be seen how these provisions will be applied in practice.

Awards

32 Decisions by the arbitral tribunal

Failing party agreement, is it sufficient if decisions by the arbitral tribunal are made by a majority of all its members or is a unanimous vote required? What are the consequences for the award if an arbitrator dissents?

Usually, in the case of a three-member tribunal, one of the arbitrators is appointed to act as the chair of the tribunal, and in this case section 20 of the Act permits an award to be made by a majority of the arbitrators, with the view of the chair prevailing if the arbitrators cannot reach a unanimous or majority decision. Alternatively (and quite rarely) the third arbitrator may act as an umpire under section 21 of the Act. In the event that the other arbitrators are unable to reach an agreement, the umpire can, by order of the court, replace them as the tribunal with power to make all decisions in the arbitration.

These procedures are not mandatory under the Act and may be displaced by party agreement (sections 20(1), 21(1) and 22(1)).

33 Dissenting opinions

How does your domestic arbitration law deal with dissenting opinions?

Although dissenting opinions are allowed under English law, they are infrequent. Section 52(3) of the Act provides that a dissenting member of the tribunal need not sign the award. A dissenting opinion does not form part of the award under the Act. Consequently, a party cannot rely on a dissenting opinion to sustain a challenge for serious irregularity under section 68 (F v M [2009] EWHC 275 (TCC)). But a dissenting opinion might be admissible as evidence in relation to procedural matters or on an appeal on a point of law under section 69 (B v A [2010] EWHC 1626 (Comm)).

34 Form and content requirements

What form and content requirements exist for an award?

There is no statutory definition of an award in the Act. The parties are free to agree on the form of an award, failing which section 52 of the Act sets out the formal requirements. The award must be in writing, signed by all of the arbitrators who assent to it, and it must state reasons unless it is an agreed award or the parties have agreed to dispense with reasons. In addition, the award must state the seat of the arbitration and the date on which the award is made.

The court gave useful guidance on the adequacy of the reasons stated for an award in Compton Beauchamp Estates Limited v Spence [2013] EWHC 1101.

35 Time limit for award

Does the award have to be rendered within a certain time limit under your domestic arbitration law or under the rules of the domestic arbitration institutions mentioned above?

The Act does not include time limits for the tribunal to render an award, although it is always open to the parties to agree upon a particular time limit. If a time limit is imposed by agreement of the parties, unless they agree otherwise, this may be extended by the court upon the application of a party or of the tribunal under section 50 of the Act if the court considers that substantial injustice would otherwise result.

36 Date of award

For what time limits is the date of the award decisive and for what time limits is the date of delivery of the award decisive?

Any application for the correction of an award or for an additional award under section 57 of the Act must be made within 28 days of the date of the award (or any longer period agreed by the parties). Challenges to an award relating to the jurisdiction of the tribunal, alleging a serious irregularity affecting the tribunal, the proceedings or the award, or an appeal on a point of law under sections 67 to 69 of the Act must also be brought within 28 days of the date of the award (or, if there has been some form of review or appeal of an award, within 28 days of the date when the applicant was notified of the result of that process) (section 70(3)). These time limits run from the date of the award rather than from the date when the award was delivered to the parties.

The court may extend this time limit under section 79, but this power will only be exercised where the court is satisfied that all other recourse has been exhausted and that a substantial injustice would otherwise be done. See, for example, Nicola Rotenberg v Sucafina SA [2011] EWHC 901 (Comm).

In K v S [2015] EWHC 1945 (Comm), the court found that the time limit for an application to challenge an award under section 67 and 68 of the Act should not be delayed by an application for correction of the award under section 57. The court held the application for correction was immaterial because, in that case, the applicant was aware of the grounds for the challenge from the date of issue of the award. It followed that the limit for challenging the award commenced from that date, rather than from the issuance of the corrected award.

37 Types of awards

What types of awards are possible and what types of relief may the arbitral tribunal grant?

Under section 48 of the Act, the parties are free to agree which remedies the tribunal may award. In the absence of any agreement, the tribunal may make declarations, order the payment of damages, grant injunctions, order specific performance, and order the rectification, setting aside or cancellation of a document.

Under section 47 of the Act, the tribunal may make partial awards on different aspects of the dispute.

Under section 51 of the Act, the tribunal may grant consent awards.

Under section 57 of the Act, the tribunal may correct an award or make an additional award.

38 Termination of proceedings

By what other means than an award can proceedings be terminated?

If the parties reach a settlement before an award is granted, under section 51 of the Act they may request the tribunal to terminate the proceedings and record the settlement as an agreed award. An agreed award must meet all of the formal requirements of an award, and must state that it is an award of the tribunal.

39 Cost allocation and recovery

How are the costs of the arbitral proceedings allocated in awards? What costs are recoverable?

Section 61(1) of the Act provides that the tribunal may make an award allocating the costs of the arbitration between the parties. This power is subject to any agreement by the parties (either in the arbitration agreement itself or in the institutional rules selected). However, an agreement that one party is to pay the whole or part of the costs of the arbitration regardless of its outcome is only valid if made after the dispute in question has arisen (section 60).

It is usual in English court proceedings that 'costs follow the event', and this position is reflected in section 61(2) of the Act which provides that an arbitral tribunal shall award costs on the basis of this general principle (unless this is inappropriate in the circumstances). The term 'costs' includes the fees and expenses of the arbitrators, the fees and expenses of any arbitral institution, and the legal and other costs of the parties (section 59).

Sections 62 to 65 of the Act set out additional detailed rules relating to the recovery of costs.

40 Interest

May interest be awarded for principal claims and for costs and at what rate?

Section 49 of the Act provides that the parties are free to agree on the powers of the tribunal with regards to interest and if no such agreement is made, the tribunal may award simple or compound interest at rates it considers 'meet the justice of the case'. Therefore, absent agreement of the parties on the point, the tribunal has considerable flexibility over the award of interest under the Act.

Proceedings subsequent to issuance of an award

41 Interpretation and correction of awards

Does the arbitral tribunal have the power to correct or interpret an award on its own or at the parties' initiative? What time limits apply?

Section 57 of the Act empowers the tribunal, on its own initiative or on application by a party, to correct an error or remove an ambiguity in an award, or to issue an additional award in respect of a claim that was presented to the tribunal but not dealt with in the original award. An applicant must show that any claim it says was omitted was in fact presented to the tribunal, and the focus should be on the substance rather than the form (Cadogan Maritime Inc v Turner Shipping Inc [2013] EWHC 138 (Comm)). An application under section 57 must be made within 28 days of the date of the original award (which may be less than 28 days from the date when the award was served) and the new award must be issued within 28 days of the date of the application. The tribunal may also issue a corrected award under section 57 under its own initiative within 28 days of the date of the original award. The parties may agree an extension to the time limits under section 57.

42 Challenge of awards

How and on what grounds can awards be challenged and set aside?

The Act departs from the Model Law in some respects in relation to challenges to an arbitration award issued by a tribunal within the jurisdiction. However, the court has adopted a constrained approach to appeals under the Act and few have been successful.

An award may be set aside on the following grounds:

- The tribunal lacked substantive jurisdiction (section 67). Such a challenge must be made at the earliest possible opportunity, failing which the right to object will be waived under section 73. Where a tribunal issues a partial award (see question 37) on the matter of its jurisdiction, a party's failure to challenge that award under section 67 within the time frame laid out in section 70 (see question 21) deprives it of the right to raise the challenge at a later time (section 73(2), see, by way of example, Emirates Trading Agency LLC v Sociedade de Fomento Industrial Private Limited [2015] EWHC 1452 (Comm)). The grounds on which the appeal is made must have been considered by the tribunal (Athletic Union of Constantinople v National Basketball Association (No. 2) [2002] EWCA Civ 830). They usually concern the existence of a valid arbitration agreement between the parties. See, for example, Finmoon Ltd v Baltic Reefers Management Ltd [2012] EWHC 920 (Comm). Generally, the court is slow to exercise its discretion; see, for example, Integral Petroleum v Melars Groups Ltd [2015] EWHC 1893 (Comm), where an application for relief under section 67 was refused, even though it was found that the tribunal's ruling that it lacked jurisdiction was incorrect.
- The award was affected by a serious irregularity (section 68). It is rare for an appeal under section 68 to be successful. It is limited to those cases where justice requires the court to intervene. The grounds constituting a serious irregularity are divided into those affecting the arbitral procedure and those affecting the award. None of them permit the court to reconsider the merits of the award, or whether the tribunal's findings of fact or law were correct (see Lesotho Highlands Development Authority v Impregilo SpA [2005] UKHL 43; Primera Maritime (Hellas) Ltd and others v Jiangsu Eastern Heavy Industry Co Ltd and another [2013] EWHC 3066 (Comm)). Nor will the court overturn an award on the basis that the tribunal failed to give sufficient weight to particular evidence (Schwebel v Schwebel [2012] EWHC 3280 (TCC)), because an award was made conditional upon a failure to show cause why the debt was not owed (UCM Mining Zambia Ltd v Konkola Copper Mines plc [2014] EWHC 2374 (Comm)), or because of delay in issuing the award (B.V. Scheepswerf Damen Gorinchem v The Marine Institute [2015] EWHC 1810 (Comm)). A tribunal's award based on the conclusion that one provision was a penalty was overturned where the party advancing the penalty argument had applied it to a different provision of the parties' agreement (Brockton Capital LLP v Atlantic-Pacific Capital, Inc [2014] EWHC 1459 (Comm)). The Commercial Court Guide clarifies that an appeal under section 68 may be dismissed without a hearing, and that a party could be sanctioned with indemnity costs if it loses an appeal under section 68 having refused to allow the appeal to proceed on the papers without a hearing.
- An appeal on a point of English law (section 69). This is a departure from the Model Law, but it is limited in scope. An appeal under section 69 may only be brought with the permission of the court or with the agreement of all other parties to the arbitration. The Court of Appeal has a threshold discretion to allow an appeal under section 69, but this will only be exercised in limited circumstances: Kyla Shipping Company Ltd v Bunge SA [2013] EWCA Civ 734. The point of law under appeal must substantially affect the rights of at least one of the parties. In addition, it must be one on which the conclusion of the tribunal is obviously wrong, or it must be a question of general public importance and the decision of the tribunal must be open to serious doubt. The right to appeal under section 69 may be excluded by agreement of the parties.

An application to appeal on any of these grounds must be made within 28 days of the date of the award being appealed. The court may, under section 70, make orders for security for the respondent's costs of the application, and for payment into court of any sums due under the arbitration award. In X v Y [2013] EWHC 1104 (Comm), Teare J made an order for security for costs against X where there was a real risk that any costs order made against that party would not be enforced without considerable delay and expense.

43 Levels of appeal

How many levels of appeal are there? How long does it generally take until a challenge is decided at each level? Approximately what costs are incurred at each level? How are costs apportioned among the parties?

In theory, there are three potential levels of appeal. The initial application must be made to the Commercial Court, the part of the High Court that is charged with dealing with applications on arbitration matters. The application must be made within 28 days of the date of the award being challenged, and a hearing would usually take place within six to nine months of the date of the application.

Further appeals may only be made with permission. The Commercial Court may grant permission to appeal to the Court of Appeal, and if it refuses permission, then in very rare instances the Court of Appeal may permit the appeal to proceed. A further appeal is possible to the Supreme Court, again only with permission. This is rarely granted. Indeed, we are only aware of one case in which the Supreme Court addressed an issue under the Act dealing with an arbitration seated in the jurisdiction: Jivraj v Hashwani [2011] UKSC 40.

Appeals at each level routinely take more than a year to reach judgment. The general rule is that costs follow the event (ie, the losing party will be ordered to pay the reasonable costs of the successful party).

44 Recognition and enforcement

What requirements exist for recognition and enforcement of domestic and foreign awards, what grounds exist for refusing recognition and enforcement, and what is the procedure?

Section 66 of the Act provides that with leave of the court an award made by an arbitral tribunal may be enforced in the same manner as a judgment or order of the court, with judgment being entered in the terms of the award. Leave will not be given if the party against whom the award is to be enforced can demonstrate that the tribunal lacked the jurisdiction to make the award (section 66(3)).

With regards to foreign arbitration awards made in a New York Convention state, sections 100 to 103 of the Act provide for recognition and enforcement of these awards upon the production to the court of an authenticated original or certified copy of the award together with the original or certified copy of the arbitration agreement. If the award is in a foreign language, a certified translation must also be provided (section 102). With the leave of the court, these awards may be enforced in the same manner as a judgment or order of the court (section 101(2)).

The grounds under section 103 of the Act for refusing recognition and enforcement of a New York Convention award are narrow and include:

- that a party to the arbitration was under some incapacity;
- that the arbitration agreement was not valid under the relevant law;
- that the person against whom the award is invoked was not given proper notice of the arbitration or was otherwise unable to present its case;
- that the award is beyond the scope of the matters submitted to arbitration;
- that the composition of the tribunal was contrary to the parties' agreement or the relevant law;
- that the award is not yet binding on the parties, or has been set aside or suspended by a competent authority under the relevant law;
- that the award relates to matters which are not capable of settlement by arbitration; and
- that it would be contrary to public policy to enforce the award.

Awards to which the New York Convention does not apply remain enforceable under the Arbitration Act 1950 (section 99 of the Act).

The relevant procedural rules for applying for enforcement of an award are set out at CPR 62.18.

The case of Ecobank Transnational Inc v Tanoh [2015] EWHC 1874 (Comm) serves as a reminder for those seeking to avoid enforcement that such an application can be defeated by delay. In that case, eight months had passed since foreign court proceedings had been commenced in breach of an arbitration agreement.

Update and trends

In this section last year, we considered the success of Raytheon Systems in an LCIA arbitration, obtaining a £224 million award against the United Kingdom. The UK government subsequently challenged the award, which the High Court partially upheld in early 2015. Shortly thereafter, the government announced it had agreed to a settlement of £150 million.

Following the introduction of its 2014 Arbitration Rules, in June 2015 the LCIA published a series of 'Guidance Notes': Notes for Arbitrators; Notes for Parties and Notes on Emergency Procedures. The latter includes 'case studies' which illustrate whether particular scenarios are likely to satisfy the requirement of 'exceptional urgency' for the expedited formation of a tribunal. The Notes are not legally binding, but are expressly intended to highlight 'points for parties to consider in the conduct of LCIA arbitrations'. The non-binding nature of the Notes can be contrasted with the mandatory provisions provided by other arbitral institutions in similar publications, such as the Hong Kong International Arbitration Centre and Singapore International Arbitration Centre.

On 17 March 2015, the UK became a founding signatory to the United Nations Convention on Transparency in Treaty-based Investor-State Arbitration (the Mauritius Convention). The Mauritius Convention provides for publicity of arbitration documents and hearings according to the UNCITRAL Rules on Transparency in international investment arbitration proceedings. The Convention will enter into force after ratification by three signatory states (currently pending).

This year, the High Court has considered a number of interesting applications regarding challenges to, and the recognition and enforcement of, arbitration awards.

For example, in BV Scheepswerf Damen Gorinchem v The Marine Institute [2015] EWHC 1810 (Comm), the High Court dismissed an application challenging an arbitral award under section 68 of the Act on the ground of 'serious irregularity affecting the tribunal, the proceedings or the award'. The applicant alleged that a delay of over 12 months from the final hearing to issuing the award fell within the scope of this section. The court held that while delay could, of itself, amount to a serious irregularity, absent demonstrable prejudice to the applicant, it was not prepared to set the award aside.

In Anatolie Stati, Gabriel Stati, Ascom Group SA and Terra Raf Trans Trading Ltd v Republic of Kazakhstan [2015] EWHC 2542 (Comm), the High Court considered an award issued in Sweden, which was the subject of annulment proceedings in the Swedish courts. Of its own volition, in the interests of comity and the efficient administration of justice, the Court elected to adjourn an application for recognition and enforcement until the conclusion of the Swedish proceedings.

Finally, the recast Brussels Regulation (1215/2012) has applied to legal proceedings commenced on or after 10 January 2015. The European Union has affirmed that arbitration remains outside the scope of the Regulation, and that member state courts should not be prevented from staying or dismissing proceedings in favour of arbitration (Recital 12). Under the previous regime, the English courts endorsed anti-suit injunctions in favour of arbitration and arbitral tribunal relief (West Tankers Inc v Allianz SpA & Anr [2012] EWHC 854 (Comm)). It remains to be seen whether the recast Regulation will affect this position. Further, the recast Regulation expressly states that the New York Convention takes precedence. In theory, the new approach should reduce the risk of 'torpedo actions' on the courts of other member states. However, it is not yet clear whether the courts of a member state, such as England and Wales, will be expected to enforce an international arbitral award, and disregard a judgment of another member state's court conflicting with the award.

45 Enforcement of foreign awards

What is the attitude of domestic courts to the enforcement of foreign awards set aside by the courts at the place of arbitration?

Section 103(2) of the Act sets out the limited grounds on which recognition or enforcement of a New York Convention award may be refused. These include that 'the award has been set aside or suspended by a competent authority of the country in which, or under the law of which, it was made.' The mere fact that an application has been made in a foreign jurisdiction to set aside the award will usually result in a stay of enforcement proceedings. See, for example Anatolie Stati, Gabriel Stati, Ascom Group SA and Terra Raf Trans Trading Ltd v Republic of Kazakhstan [2015] EWHC 2542 (Comm), where the High Court exercised its inherent case management powers to adjourn an application for enforcement of an ECT award while annulment proceedings were under way in the Swedish courts.

In Yukos Capital SARL v OJSC Rosneft Oil Company [2014] EWHC 1288 (Comm), the court considered as a preliminary issue whether the enforcement of an arbitral award that had been set aside by the courts of the seat is precluded under common law. The court concluded that it was not, and if the claimant could satisfy the court that the foreign court's judgment offended against basic principles of honesty, natural justice and domestic concepts of public policy, the court would have power to enforce the award. It remains to be seen whether the claimant in those proceedings will be able to meet its high burden of persuasion.

46 Enforcement of orders by emergency arbitrators

Does your domestic arbitration legislation, case law or the rules of domestic arbitration institutions provide for the enforcement of orders by emergency arbitrators?

The Act refers to 'arbitrators' or the 'arbitral tribunal', but does not expressly refer to 'emergency arbitrators'. Section 41 does permit the tribunal to make 'pre-emptory orders', which the court may enforce pursuant to section 42. However, it is not clear whether the court will consider an emergency arbitrator to fall within the definition of 'the tribunal', whose orders would be enforceable under section 42. These provisions are not applicable to arbitrations seated outside the jurisdiction.

The issue is perhaps even more uncertain with regard to decisions of an emergency arbitrator in foreign proceedings. First, because not all decisions are designated as 'awards' in institutional rules, and it is unlikely decisions termed 'orders' are enforceable. Second, even where an 'award' is issued, the court may not view it as sufficiently final and binding within the meaning of article V of the New York Convention to warrant enforcement.

Article 9.9 of the LCIA Rules 2014 provides that the award of an emergency arbitrator shall 'take effect as an award under article 26.8', making it 'final and binding on the parties'. While this is perhaps designed to encourage enforcement by the court, we are not aware of any case law specifically on this point. In practice, institutional rules generally include an undertaking to comply with any awards or orders, which, conscious of alienating the tribunal, and the potential for adverse costs orders, parties are unlikely to breach lightly. This may explain why the English courts do not appear to have addressed this issue yet.

47 Cost of enforcement

What costs are incurred in enforcing awards?

A party seeking enforcement of an arbitral award must comply with the procedure set out in CPR 62.18 and pay a court fee. The application must be made to the court, and supported by the arbitration agreement, the award, and an affidavit or witness statement and a draft order. Typically, most of the cost of enforcement will be made up of legal fees, which could rise quickly if the application is contested. However these may be recoverable by a successful party under the usual adverse costs principles applicable to English litigation. The applicant will also be liable for the associated costs of serving the defendant, which should be borne in mind particularly if the defendant is located abroad. Finally, identifying and seizing the defendant's assets will involve additional costs, which could also be considerable.

Other

48 Judicial system influence

What dominant features of your judicial system might exert an influence on an arbitrator from your country?

Some particular features of the English legal system and establishment likely to affect arbitration include:

- English (and other common law) arbitrators may be more likely than their civil law counterparts to make orders for extensive document disclosure;
- there is an assumption that the English rules of privilege will apply; and
- the assumption of 'loser pays' costs codified in the Act is a significant consideration for arbitration in England.

49 Professional or ethical rules applicable to counselAre specific professional or ethical rules applicable to counsel in international arbitration in your country? Does best practice in your country reflect (or contradict) the IBA Guidelines on Party Representation in International Arbitration?

No specific framework governs the ethical conduct of counsel in international arbitration. The general ethical standards for solicitors are set out in the Solicitors Regulatory Authority's Code of Conduct. For those 'practising overseas' on a non-temporary basis, the SRA's Overseas Rules apply, which exclude some of the Code of Conduct rules – including those relating to advocacy – which would otherwise apply. The conduct of barristers is governed by the Code of Conduct in the Bar Standards Board's (BSB) Handbook. Both codes govern conduct of English counsel in international arbitration.

European counsel working in Europe are subject to article 6(1) of EU Directive 98/5/EC, which provides that 'a lawyer practising under his home-country professional title shall be subject to the same rules of professional conduct as lawyers practising under the relevant professional title of the host member state in respect of all the activities he pursues in that territory.' In theory, therefore, a European lawyer would be subject to the applicable Code of Conduct. However, it is unclear whether European lawyers practising temporarily in the jurisdiction, for example, at an arbitration seated in London, fall within the scope of the Directive. European lawyers may also be subject to the Council of Bars and Law Societies of Europe's Code of Conduct for European Lawyers.

For other foreign lawyers, no mandatory conduct rules apply. The 2014 LCIA Rules include an annex described as General Guidelines for the Parties' Legal Representatives. Absent the parties' agreement to the contrary, these guidelines apply to all arbitrations conducted under the 2014 LCIA Rules, whether or not seated in the jurisdiction.

The IBA Guidelines on Party Representation in International Arbitration likely represent best practice in England and Wales. Guidelines 18 to 24 relate to the preparation of witness evidence. Counsel are permitted to liaise with witnesses and experts, and to assist in the preparation of their evidence. While these provisions are most likely compatible with the Solicitors' Code of Conduct, the BSB's Code arguably requires a higher standard. Rule C2.rC9.4 provides: 'You must not rehearse, practise with or coach a witness in respect of their evidence.' A similar prohibition exists under English common law (R v Momodou [2005] EWCA Crim 177).

50 Regulation of activitiesWhat particularities exist in your jurisdiction that a foreign practitioner should be aware of?

Overall, London is an attractive and commonly selected situs for arbitration, largely because London has a high level of infrastructure and support for the procedure of arbitration. It has laws and courts that are very respectful of arbitration and are designed to allow the process to be followed largely without intervention by the court; it has a great many experienced arbitrators and counsel based in London or in nearby European jurisdictions; and it also has a number of hearing centres such as the International Dispute Resolution Centre and the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators.

Foreign practitioners should be aware that visas are required for entry into the UK for citizens of many non-European countries.
