“Challenges in the extended Internet: How to Defend Your Interests and Addressing the Competition in the New gTLDs, Whether you Applied or Not”

It is expected that during the week of June 25, 2012, ICANN will publish the applications for new gTLDs (generic Top Level Domains).

Thereafter, applicants will be able to defend their application and question the applications of others. Also, interested parties who have not submitted applications, will be able to take action against pending applications.

Alternative Dispute Resolution Procedures have been established in order to obtain efficient, reasoned decisions at a manageable cost.

During this seminar, representatives of OMPI and the ICC will provide commentary and analysis of these procedures.
